- For approximately three years I was in charge of the process of reforming the educational system of the Russian Orthodox Church. This system includes 1 doctoral school, 12 universities, and 80 seminaries in 9 countries. My task was to reconfigure this system and to make it compatible with the western educational standards, particularly the "Bologna process". During the process of adjusting the Russian system to meet the Bologna requirements I established numerous international connections of the Russian theological schools with the western universities. I organized joint PhD and Master programs with the Universities in Amsterdam, Helsinki, Heidelberg, Louvain, Fribourg in Switzerland, and others.*
